

NWAC 2022

Northwest Anthropological Conference 2022 Call for Abstracts

The 75th Northwest Anthropological Conference will be held online 9-12 March 2022. Registration is free, thanks to the support of the Northwest Anthropological Association and 2022 sponsors. The conference will be hosted on the Socio event platform.

The first NWAC was hosted in 1948 at Reed College, chaired by Luther Cressman, and was attended by 49 people. In 2021, over 750 people registered from around the world to attend our first virtual conference. This year, we ask Northwest anthropologists to reflect on the 75-year history of NWAC and the history of Anthropology in the Northwest.

Abstracts and Session Proposals are DUE 7 JANUARY 2022

Planning a Session/Event/Panel/Training?

Are you planning on hosting an event at NWAC 2022? We ask that session/event/panel/training organizers collect the necessary information from their co-presenters and submit a session form.

Presenting a Paper?

- We ask that presenters plan to speak for 15 minutes and allow 5 minutes for questions and transition to the next speaker.
- For more information on audio/visual formats, please see the NWAC 2022 FAQ.

Presenting a Poster?

- Pdf format recommended 48" x 36".
- For more information on audio/visual formats, please see the NWAC 2022 FAQ.
- Your poster will be available throughout the duration of the conference and scheduled for a 20-minute Q&A period but you are not required to attend that live.
- Final drafts of posters will be due one week prior to the conference.

Interested in Submitting to the Journal of Northwest Anthropology 2022 Proceedings e-Journal?

The Northwest Anthropological Association (NWAA) has partnered with the Journal of Northwest Anthropology (JONA) to produce the first-ever NWAC Proceedings in 2021, which presents NWAC papers and posters in an e-journal edition of JONA. Visit <https://www.northwestanthropology.com/nwac-proceedings> to learn more about the submission requirements for 2022. We ask you to consider format requirements now, and work with internal reviewers to approve your paper/poster content for publication. Submissions will be due one week after the conference.
